JOIN THE HERD and lace up your running shoes for the Chick-fil-A Connect Race Series of East Cobb, GA on October 12, 2013. The race will benefit Schools for Niger, Africa and help provide affordable alternatives for the children and families of Niger, Africa.

According to the Schools for Niger, Africa website, (www.schoolsfornigerafrica.org), this area is considered extremely poor and government support for schools has severely declined. This leaves many children to either go without an education or beg on the streets for money to pay for expensive private schooling. Worse yet, for those children who are able to attend elementary school, there are very few middle schools where their instruction may continue. Without the opportunity for further education, many of these children have no hope of getting jobs that may one day help raise them out of their impoverished condition.

Chick-fil-A at East Lake is promoting this important event so please spread the word. Thank you for your support!
